Houses start coming down in summer

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

The privatization of Fort Jackson family housing will begin early this summer with the demolition and rebuilding of homes in the Pierce Terrace 2 and 6 neighborhoods.

Crews will begin demolishing 138 housing units in early July and rebuilding 106 homes as the first phase of the Residential Community Initiative, according to Wayne Shealy, Fort Jackson's RCI engineer. There will also be new construction of homes during this time in Pierce Terrace 7.

"Pierce Terrace 6 will all be demolished and rebuilt and we hope to have the first home rebuilt about 12 months after demolition begins," he said. "We plan to keep inconveniences to a minimum for surrounding neighbors."

The Army announced in May the selection of GMH/Centex Military Communities to prepare a Community Development and Management Plan as part of the initiative to privatize family housing at Fort Jackson. GMH will be responsible for development, construction,

Army values mirror justice, fairness, peace of King's dream

Nearly 600 people filled the NCO Club Jan. 23 to celebrate the life and accomplishments of Martin Luther King Jr. The president of Benedict College, Dr. David Swinton, served as the guest speaker at the luncheon hosted by the 193rd Infantry Brigade to honor the slain civil rights leader.

"I think sometimes we may not fully appreciate the importance of what he tried to do," Swinton told the crowd. "He was convinced that what he was attempting to accomplish for African-Americans was absolutely essential for the prosperity of this country and the prosperity of the world."

Swinton said the peace, justice and fairness that King preached was a radical thought at that time.

"We had traditionally operated in the mindset of getting whatever I can by any means possible, if that meant stomping on you then I would stomp on you," he said.

Swinton added that by reading between the lines of what King said, he was talking about the power of love, compassion and charity — values Swinton said are in line with the Army values.

"If the Soldier next to you isn't committed to taking care of you like a brother or a sister, then you have problems in the Army," he said. "If a Soldier isn't really committed to being honest and truthful you have problems in the Army."

Fort Jackson's commanding general, Brig. Gen. James H. Schwitters said he was struck between the parallel of the values of King and the values of the Army.

"I'm proud of the Army in taking the lead in recognizing the vision, the courage and the selfless service of Dr. King," Schwitters said.

While a part of King's dream has been reached, Swinton said there is a long way to go. He pointed out that in the African-American community poverty, lack of adequate health care and

Voting Assistance Program; cost of youth services programs

Q What is the purpose of the Voting Assistance Program and how does the process work?

Col. Dixon

A The Department of the Army Implementing Instructions for the 2008-2009 Voting Assistance Program lists two basic missions associated with the Army Voting Assistance Program.

The first mission, and primary focus of the program, is the traditional voting assistance provided to Soldiers, their family members, and overseas DA civilian employees and their family members. Individual voting assistance consists of unit Voting Assistance Officers providing technical guidance.

The second mission is to educate every Soldier about the importance and value of voting and to notify them of the opportunities they have to participate in the voting franchise, if they so desire. The process consists of:

Unit commanders

— Must appoint a unit voting assistance officer.

— Provide Soldiers who want to vote the maximum opportunity to do so.

— Ensure unit members and their family members have ready access to absentee voter registration, ballot requests and absentee submission information.

Unit voting assistance officers

— Provide Soldiers and their voting-age family members Federal Post Card Applications for registering to vote in the state of their legal voting residence.

— Provide assistance with the state-by-state application instructions contained in the Voting Assistance Guide and the state voting Web site.

— Provide education and assistance on the absentee voting process.

Soldiers and family members

— Mail FPCA to election officials in the county of their legal voting residence.

— Receive absentee ballots in the mail.

— Return completed ballot so that it arrives at the county elections office by the deadline set by the state.

— Submit FPCA whenever there is a change in address. Some states also accept FPCA via fax or e-mail.

For more information, contact your unit voting assistance officer or visit www.vote.army.mil.

Q I have a child in an after-school program at the Youth Center and another in the middle school after-school program. Why do I have to pay for my second-grader and the program is free for my sixth-grader?

A Fort Jackson fees for Child and Youth Services programs are based on the Department of Defense and Department of the Army fee policy.

For the Child Development Centers and the School Age Services program, these fees are based on total family income with income categories and ranges set by the Department of Defense annually.

The middle school program, however, is provided at no cost in compliance with guidance in the Department of the Army fee policy. Established in 1999, the middle school after-school program provides a safe, secure environment for middle-school youth during what research and crime statistics have identified as a high-risk time (3-6 p.m.) for youth involvement in at-risk behaviors.

These services were designed to enhance readiness by reducing the conflict between mission and parental responsibilities, to facilitate family well-being and to reinforce Army values.

The Fort Jackson middle school program is located at the “House” on Parker Lane. The hours of operation are 2:30-6:30 p.m., Monday-Friday and no-school days from 8:15 a.m. to 6:30 p.m.

The middle school after-school program offers snacks; homework assistance and tutoring; computer technology; leisure and recreation activities; sports and fitness; life skills and leadership activities. The middle school and teen programs also offer 4-H clubs in technology, photography, fine arts and citizenship.

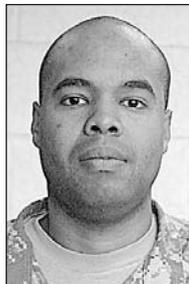

Garrison Fact of the Week

Under the Army Family Covenant, the Child and Youth Services annual registration fee is waived for all eligible users.

If a Soldier you don't know is wearing the uniform incorrectly, do you correct him/her? Why?

Sgt. David Powell

“I do, because it's according to regulations. I'd rather correct the Soldier before someone higher ranking does.”

Spc. Alana Abraham
1st Battalion,
13th Infantry Regiment

“I don't correct anyone above my rank, but I do correct Soldiers my rank and below.”

Pfc. Stephen Pearson
1st Battalion
13th Infantry Regiment

“I correct the Soldier. Any Soldier is representing the military as a whole and if one looks messed up, we all look messed up.”

Staff Sgt. Curtis Price
NCO Academy

“Yes. Soldiers represent the U.S. Army, so it's important that they present the proper image.”

Staff Sgt. Donna Robinson
NCO Academy student

“Yes. We have to uphold a certain standard when we're wearing the uniform. I would pull the Soldier to the side discretely and make an on-the-spot correction.”

ESL new building ready for Soldiers

Soldiers in the English as a Second Language Program work on their lessons in the computer lab located in their new home. A ribbon-cutting ceremony Monday marked the program moving from control of the 187th Ordinance Battalion to Company D, 120th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception). Col. Robert Choppa, commander, 171st Infantry Brigade, said English as a second language has been a part of the Army longer than most people realize. "It (ESL) didn't start with 9/11. It probably started back in the formative days of our nation," he said. "If you think of when General Lafayette was talking to his Soldiers, there was probably some interpretation required." Soldiers in the ESL program will eventually attend Basic Combat Training and the interpreter/translator course.

Semmes Road still not open to through traffic

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

Bad weather and a broken phone cable are being blamed for delaying the reopening of Semmes Road.

Crews expected to have the section of Semmes Road, between Essayons Way and Pershing Road, opened before Block Leave in December. However, according to Bryan Tempio, area engineer for the Army Corps of Engineers, heavy precipitation put contractors behind schedule.

"The delays were because of the rains," Tempio said. "There is also a broken phone cable (crews) are trying to repair. But they are not sure whether they can reopen the road and repair it or if they have to keep it closed in order to repair it."

There is no firm date, Tempio said, when Semmes Road will reopen to traffic.

The road was closed in July to make way for the reconstruction of Semmes Lake Dam. The $1.2 million project entailed replacing a drainage pipe underneath Semmes Road, which acts as an emergency spillway for the dam, with a larger pipe.

Semmes Lakes Dam was beginning to fail because the pipe had a large crack in it and dirt was starting to fill up the pipe through the crack. The problem was also causing Semmes Road to sink where it passes over the drainage pipe.

"You never realize how important a road is until you can't use it anymore. Many people use Semmes Road to travel across the installation," said Col. Lillian Dixon, Fort Jackson garrison commander. "We look forward to the road being reopened."

Contractors also drained and dredged Semmes Lake to remove built up sediment that was filling the lake in. The process deepened the lake and the water level is starting to build back up.

However, the lake will be drained again for Morale, Welfare and Recreation to build a 70-foot fishing pier. The lake will be restocked with a balanced population of large-mouth bass, brim and sunfish.

Marines learn how Soldiers heal, rehabilitate

Heath Hamacher
Leader Staff

A group of 20 Marines visited Fort Jackson Tuesday to observe Army training methods, with an emphasis on the physical rehabilitation and reconditioning of Soldiers injured during Basic Combat Training.

Visitors included the company commander of the Special Training Company, Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S.C., the executive officer, a chaplain, a civilian athletic trainer and several drill instructors.

Marine Capt. Lonnie Baxley, company commander, Special Training Co., said this was an opportunity to get his drill instructors away from Parris Island to see how their counterparts conduct training at a different training facility.

"We're always looking to improve what we're doing; always looking for a different perspective," Baxley said. "We felt like we could come down here, take away some of the things the Army does well and maybe, if possible, implement them."

The Marines observed the 120th Adjutant General Battalion's (Reception) Warrior Training and Rehabilitation Program physical training, toured company areas and the physical therapy clinic, and watched injured BCT Soldiers receive basic skills training while they recuperate.

Baxley said Capt. Richard Moravec, commander of the Fort Jackson Fitness Training Company and a former Marine, was an excellent source of knowledge.

"With him being a physical therapist and knowing he's had a pretty good success rate at getting Soldiers rehabilitated and back out to training, it's great," Baxley said. "We're looking at how they run their physical fitness program, what he does to help keep them motivated, keep them focused and get them back out to training."

Moravec said an important part of the Fitness Training Co.'s mission is not only

Black History Month traveling tour comes to Columbia

Mike A. Glasch
Leader Staff

Columbia will be one of four cities to host the 2008 U.S. Army "Heroes Among Us" Black History Month Program. The traveling tour will take place in stages during a three-week period beginning Tuesday.

The first part of the program is a two-day photo display honoring African-American Soldiers and pioneers.

"Heroes Among Us" is a photo display chronicling the history of African-American Soldiers' service in the U.S. Army and also showcases legendary African-American civil rights, education, entertainment and sports pioneers.

It will be held at the McCrory Galleri, 1276 Assembly St., from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Tuesday and Wednesday. There is no admission charge.

A "Heroes Tour" to local high schools will complement the exhibit. The tour features African-American Soldiers who will share their stories with students and lead them in interactive classroom exercises which provide insight into the Army's role in American history.

The Army has also created a "Heroes

Among Us" lesson plan which highlights more than 300 years of African-American Soldiers military service. The study guide is designed for high school students and can be used in classrooms during Black History Month and throughout the school year.

Garrison Commander Col. Lillian Dixon will help kick off the event.

"I'm honored to be a part of helping spread the story of African-Americans in the Army," Dixon said. "The Army has been at the forefront of bringing about racial equality in our society."

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — For those who missed the December deadline for an audition in the 2008 U.S. Army Soldier Show, now is the time to contact director Tim Higdon.

Audition spaces are still available for the 2008 season.

Army Entertainment Division needs vocalists, dancers and technicians for the song-and-dance extravaganza. The cast and crew likely will consist of 12 vocalists, five dancers and six technicians — ranging from stage and costume managers to audio and light technicians.

"A lot of experience isn't necessarily required — just a willingness to work and a willingness to be a part of a team that has a unique mission," said Higdon, who has extended the application deadline to Feb. 10. "We hope to make the whole show very high-tempo and high-energy, with a lot of entertainment that people can get into and have a good time with."

Application instructions are available on the Internet at www.ArmyMWR.com by clicking on Recreation & Leisure, Entertainment, and U.S. Army Soldier Show. For more details, contact Higdon at (703) 806-3698 or Timothy.B.Higdon@us.army.mil.

"We have cities that need to be rebuilt, rivers that need to be cleaned up, houses that are falling apart, we have kids who need to be taught better and cared for better," Swinton said. "We have so many things to do that if we put folks to work doing them we would be adding to the value of our economy, giving them some dignity by allowing them to feel that are truly a part of this economy.

"This is what King was talking about; pursuing justice and pursuing fairness," he added.

maintenance and management of family housing at Fort Jackson.

GMH is planning a new 144-house development called Greenfield. The new development will be located just north of Semmes Road, across from the Fort Jackson Golf Club.

Effective June 1, family housing will transferred to GMH, which will be placing families in their homes or placing them on the waiting list if housing is not available.

The office will be located at 5939 Thomas Court until completion of the community center, which will be located at Brown Avenue.

"It is not going to be that much different than it is now," Shealy said. "The main difference is that starting June 1 occupants will be signing a lease, just as they would if they went off the installation and rented a property."

Community center construction is expected to begin this summer during the initial phase and last 12 to 18 months.

"The community center will feature a computer room where residents will have access to the Internet. It will also serve as a gathering point for the community if occupants want to have parties," Shealy said. "In addition, the center will house the main leasing office."

The first phase of RCI will also include the renovation of housing units in Pierce Terrace 5 and 7.

"Renovation will take place as units become available," said Ian Andrews, RCI asset management. "We will do it when people PCS (permanent change of station) so we do not have to relocate occupants and inconvenience them."

Several town hall meetings, housing mayor meetings and focus groups will be held in the upcoming months to notify residents about the demolition, renovation and construction of new homes, Shealy said.

The six-year project is expected to cost $184 million. Of Fort Jackson's current 1,162 housing units, 240 will be renovated and the rest will be demolished throughout the project; 610 new homes will be built.

New unit trains to bridge culture gap

Chris Rasmussen
Leader Staff

Soldiers at Fort Jackson are gaining in-depth knowledge on how to interact in Middle Eastern culture, where one wrong action can jeopardize the entire mission.

The Cultural Awareness Team, which was formed in March as part of the 171st Infantry Brigade, offer their deployment experience at the Military Operations Urban Terrain site to Basic Combat Training and Advanced Individual Training Soldiers as well as Fort Jackson non-commissioned officers and officers.

“A lot of our Soldiers have never been out of their city, so it is a culture shock when they go over there,” said Maj. Chris Woody, Victory Support Battalion executive officer. “Our Soldiers will be in a combat zone in 90 days when they leave here. We have to give them every tool we can for them to survive.”

The Cultural Awareness Team — comprising of interpreters from a variety of Middle Eastern countries including Morocco, Iran, Lebanon and Iraq — have all deployed in the Global War on Terror. Information taught is taken from classes formed by U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command personnel at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., the proponent for Army Cultural Awareness.

“In counterinsurgency warfare, the key terrain is the population,” said Lt. Col. David Snodgrass, commander 2nd Battalion, 39th Infantry Regiment. “If the population believes you have their best interests at heart, they will be much more likely to support you rather than the insurgents or the terrorists.

“It is difficult for an individual to oppose someone who is bringing clean water, electricity and services to their village, and who treats them with dignity and respect,” Snodgrass said. “In this type of conflict, cultural awareness is as important as any other combat skill.”

The team offers knowledge on things such as a general understanding of Islam, the Arabic language and the fact that certain acts or gestures acceptable here may be insulting there.

“We focus on how to communicate with the people and we teach the Soldiers small phrases and words meant to be used as icebreakers,” said the team’s noncommissioned officer in charge. “They like it when you try to speak their language.”

The team has also been responsible for bringing realism to the MOUT Site, which includes a mosque, cemetery, mayor’s office and signage written in Arabic.

“We come out here for Victory Forge and make their training realistic,” Woody said.

Snodgrass said he believes the training offered by the team is invaluable in the War on Terror.

“I see the Cultural Awareness Team as a huge combat multiplier at Fort Jackson,” he said. “They provide critical assistance to our trainers in how to best seize the popular support of the people in a counterinsurgency.

Without this popular support, often referred to as key terrain in a counterinsurgency, victory would not be possible.”

While members of the team could make considerably more working as contract interpreters, most consider giving back to their country more important than monetary wealth.

“We feel we are obligated as Americans and Soldiers to help other Soldiers overseas,” said a member of the team. “We are not doing it for the money. We are doing it because we feel it is our job as Americans.”

Group targets Jack's Inn guests

Christina Garza
Community FIRST Coordinator

This week's article will focus on recently completed issues which were submitted to Community FIRST/AFAP. These issues were reviewed by the Directorate of Family Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

The first issue, raised by the Family Members Focus Group, is the array of problems created by the non-military family members of graduating Soldiers for housing residents who live near the lodging area. The problems include speeding, noise from loud music and motorists using cell phones.

The group recommends that usage of Jack's Inn rentals be restricted to Mobilized Reservists, Soldiers going through a permanent change of station or military personnel attending schools on Fort Jackson.

FMWR reviewed this issue and responded that every patron of Jack's Inn signs a rental agreement that includes a list of rules concerning use of the facility.

This list will now include statements to remind patrons that operating electronic devices while driving is forbidden, that they need to drive slowly because of children playing in the area and that quiet hours begin at 10 p.m.

In addition, FMWR is requesting speed bumps in the lodging and family areas and also that the Directorate of Emergency Services increase patrols in the area during graduations.

The second issue, raised by the Civilian Employees Focus Group, is that lodging on post is not up to Army lodging standards. Kennedy Hall, Anderson Hall and Magruder Transient Area buildings are old and designed as barracks, not hotels. The plumbing, mold, ventilation and construction issues lead to an unsafe living environment for Soldiers and patrons.

The group recommended that the Army Lodging wellness plan be expedited for Fort Jackson. FMWR reviewed this issue and responded that the Fort Jackson Army Lodging Wellness Plan is an ongoing assessment of hotel/facilities and improvement projects. The installation is currently working to bring all Fort Jackson lodging areas in compliance with the standards.

Phase I, executed in 2007, includes: refinishing the furniture in Dozier Hall; new carpet and flat-top stoves installed, the rooms painted and window treatments applied. In the Palmetto Lodge the interior was renovated, new kitchenettes and closets were installed and new furniture and equipment were purchased. Additional improvements to these buildings are ongoing.

Phase II will consist of a new 209-room hotel which will take about two years to complete.

Phase III will include renovations for both Kennedy Hall, and the Magruder Transient Area.

The Community FIRST/AFAP is an ongoing process that allows the community to submit issues which cannot be fixed by the Interactive Customer Evaluation system.

In January, issues are being collected for the Army Family Action Plan Conference. Issues can be submitted through the Customer Management Services Web site or Community FIRST/AFAP ICE link, whether it affects Fort Jackson or the whole Army; feedback is important. Help the community by submitting issues and recommendations online at <http://www.jackson.army.mil/WellBeing/wellbeing.htm>.

The date has changed for the Fort Jackson Army Family Action Plan Conference. The conference will be held April 1 at the Fort Jackson Officers' Club. This is for members of the Fort Jackson community to voice concerns directly to the installation command staff. Anyone wishing to participate, as a volunteer, a delegate or in some other capacity should call the AFAP Coordinator at 751-3425/5547 by Feb. 29.

Say goodbye to BDUs, accessories in 2008

Elizabeth M. Lorge
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The Army's Deputy Chief of Staff for G-1 (Personnel) announced this month that the final wear-out date for the Army Battle Dress Uniform and Desert Battle Dress Uniform will be April 30 for both active-duty and reserve-component Soldiers.

The Army began phasing out the woodland and desert-patterned uniforms on June 14, 2004, with the debut of the digital-patterned Army Combat Uniform.

"Our Army is always looking to constantly improve on everything we do, both on and off the battlefield," said Sgt. Maj. Katrina L. Easley, uniform policy sergeant major at G-1. "We took a look the combat usability of what was once a good uniform, and based upon feedback from the field, decided to improve it and fix the many problems reported. There were at least 20 changes made and the result is the current ACU.

"Response has been fantastic. Soldiers have adapted well to the new uniform and they tell us they truly appreciate the improvements that were made. This uniform was designed by Soldiers for Soldiers."

All brown T-shirts, black combat boots and green and black jungle boots, woodland and desert-camouflage caps, olive-drab-green name and U.S. Army tapes, subdued-olive-green shoulder-sleeve insignias and the black rigger belt and web belt with open-faced black buckle will also become obsolete April 30.

Active-duty and reserve-component Soldiers can continue to wear the black-knit cap and the black micro-fleece-knit cap with the cold-weather woodland-camouflage field jacket until Sept. 30.

The Army Reserve Officer Training Corps wear-out date for these items is April 9.

According to Easley, there have not been any official surveys to determine how many Soldiers still have the BDUs or Desert BDUs, but she said it probably would be hard to find many who are not wearing the ACU.

But if Soldiers are hanging on to any of these uniforms, they can save them for posterity. They are not required to turn them in. The only requirement is that they know the wear-out date and report for duty in ACUs May 1.

"Thousands of our great Soldiers spent many years defending our country wearing that honorable uniform. I know it means something to them, just as wearing the ACU will mean something to today's Army," Easley said.

Army creates virtual installations to support families

Elizabeth M. Lorge
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — In an age of persistent conflict and geographically-dispersed families, the Army is taking family support to a new level with virtual installations and virtual Family Readiness Groups.

The Army Reserve wants to create local and Web-based virtual installations where families, who may live hundreds of miles from the nearest installation, can access the same support and resources as active-duty Soldiers and families, such as: TRICARE, child and youth services, counseling and chaplain's programs and financial and legal information.

"We need to retain these Soldiers and you do that by retaining the families," said Laura Stultz, wife of Army Reserve chief Lt. Gen. Jack Stultz. "If the families feel secure, the Soldier won't worry about them, and the families will know that their problems will be looked into. They need the same services that active-component families have on an installation because their Soldiers are putting their lives on the same line as everybody else. They deserve the same degree of help and resources."

"If the families feel secure, the Soldier won't worry about them, and the families know that their problems will be looked into."

Laura Stultz

She added that they want to have a zip-code-based system online, similar to the search function on www.MyArmyLife too.com, where Soldiers and families can enter their zip codes into the Web site and find the nearest place to get help and the nearest FRG, whether it is active-duty, Reserve or National Guard.

The next step would be to set up mini Army Reserve centers in towns and cities across America, which would function like Army Community Service offices, repositories for community support, emergency relief and even places families can go to renew their military IDs.

"I was just insistent that there be some place that you can have face to face meetings with people. A lot of people don't have access to a computer, or English is their second language, or they just don't know how to explain their needs on the telephone. I wanted there to be offices or some place across the country where families could go to and talk to somebody live.

"In my experience, there are veterans who say, 'What can we do to help?' In some instances, all we'll need to get is a computer and a telephone hookup for them; and others it will be finding a place. Some towns we can use the National Guard centers or the veterans' halls, but if there's no place to put it, we might have to find our own office space, in a shopping center or something people can find easily. Hopefully, in a few years everyone will know where it is, just like they know where the post office is," Stultz said.

Right now, the Army Reserve is beginning focus groups with families to see where they want these centers and what they want online.

Ideally, the Reserve would begin building the centers near the heaviest Reserve population centers that are far from installations.

Located two hours from the nearest FRG with four young children during her husband's deployments to the Persian Gulf and the Balkans in the Nineties, Stultz knows how hard it can be to fit crucial support meetings into busy schedules.

Per the request of families, especially children and teenagers, she and the Army Reserve are looking to find ways to incorporate chat rooms on the Web site, and plan to add this feature as soon as they work out security issues.

Chat rooms, blogs and instant messaging are also a goal of virtual FRGs, said Shaunya Murrill, the automation manager for the family programs directory at the Family, Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command. She also runs a virtual FRG for her husband's Indianapolis Recruiting Battalion.

Tested in 2004 and launched Army-wide in 2006, virtual FRGs are paid for by FMWRC and are a way for commanders, rear-detachment commanders and family readiness leaders to provide up-to-date information to families, even if they are geographically spread out, as with the reserve component.

"It was never designed to replace the FRG, but it's an extension of it," said Murrill. "Family members can find out what's going on with their unit by logging in. This is an opportunity for the commander to stay connected. I think it's been a valuable tool to my husband and his colleagues because they don't necessarily have the time to have a lot of meetings or the funding to bring in families from across the state. So this is an opportunity for them to get relevant, pertinent and timely information out.

"If you want to get involved, you see what's available, you see the calendar, you jump in if you want to, and if you don't, you don't have to," she continued. "Before with the telephone tree, when people were doing it only the old way, people would leave and kind of fall off. Here, you come in and update your information with the automated telephone tree."

To date, there are about 1,200 sites and 117,000 registered users throughout the Army. Commanders at the battalion level and up simply must fill out an application at www.ArmyFRG.org, provide a point of contact and some basic information, and Murrill and her team set up the site. They provide tutorials for the site manager and any necessary technical support.

The sites typically include news articles, photos, hyperlinks, frequently-asked questions and updates from commanders. FMWRC is still working on the security issues related to blogs and chat rooms, but the sites can have monitored forums.

Virtual FRGs have undergone the Defense Information Technology Certification Information Accreditation Process and are completely secure. Soldiers provide a list of loved ones in writing and the system automatically generates an invitation to the unit site, complete with hyperlink. The list can include anyone the Soldier wants: the spouse, but also parents and siblings, for example.

Murrill said the most common feedback she receives are requests for more interactive features and comments that the Army waited too long to go virtual, but that she never hears anything bad about the virtual FRGs.

The best thing, she said, is that instead of families having to wait for their Soldiers to tell them about events or new initiatives, the families are often updating the Soldiers.

New 30-minute circuit training to launch soon

Theresa O'Hagan

Morale, Welfare and Recreation

A new exercise program will soon be available to members of the Fort Jackson community.

"Get Ripped!" circuit training begins Feb. 15 at Knight Pool and will be available from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., Monday-Friday. "Get Ripped!" is circuit training that can be completed in 30 minutes.

"During the first few months, consultations on how to get started will be made available by appointment," said Pam Greene, fitness programmer, Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

People may start their program anytime between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. Workout equipment will be laid out in a circuit to work upper and lower body. Between each circuit, participants do 30 seconds of cardiovascular exercises — running in place, jumping jacks or marching, for example. The final round of cardiovascular exercise can be a lap in the pool. "Or, you can do the circuit and then end your work out by swimming laps, or running in the water," Greene said. It is not allowed to go in and out of the water and get back on the circuit. Music with 140 beats per minute will be played during the circuit to help everyone keep at the right pace. When beginning the circuit, a 30-minute timer is set. A red light will come on when it is time to move to the next station in the circuit. The workout time for each station is 30 seconds.

This self-paced fitness program is free and open to all MWR-eligible patrons. For optimal effect, Greene recommends doing the circuit workout three times a week.

At the beginning of his or her individual workout program, the participant will be given a biometric screening and recommended weight to use on each circuit station. Each participant will be given a sheet explaining how the circuit works, along with recommended stretches to do before and after working out.

As with any exercise program, one should consult a doctor before beginning.

If you would like to set up an appointment for a fitness consultation, either individually or as part of a group, call 751-5768.

HEALTH

Red Dress Campaign kicks off Heart Month

Sandra Norcross, RN
Moncrief Army Community Hospital

As part of American Heart Month in February, Army Public Health Nursing encourages all Americans to celebrate National Wear Red Day Friday.

National Wear Red Day is a great opportunity to reach out to women in the community and alert them to their personal risk factors for heart disease.

By wearing red and partaking in community activities, participants show their support for women and heart disease awareness.

In February 2003, the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, part of the National Institutes of Health, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, unveiled a national awareness campaign for women about heart disease called The Heart Truth, or Red Dress Campaign, which introduced the red dress as the national symbol for women and heart disease awareness.

A simple red dress works as a visual alert to get the message heard that heart disease is the leading cause of death among women.

National Wear Red Day is an annual event held the first Friday in February. The first observance was announced at the White House in February 2004. On National Wear Red Day, women and men across the country wear red to unite in the national movement to give women a personal and urgent wake-up call about their risk of heart disease. Everyone can participate in this life-saving awareness movement by showing off a favorite red dress, shirt or tie, or by wearing the Red Dress pin.

For more information about National Wear Red Day activities and The Heart Truth, including downloadable materials on women and heart disease and ordering information for the Red Dress pin, visit www.hearttruth.gov or call the NHLBI Health Information Center at (301)592-8573. For additional information, call APHN at 751-5035.

Facts about colorectal cancer

Sandra Norcross, RN
Moncrief Army Community Hospital

Colorectal cancer is the second leading cause of cancer death in the United States, despite the fact that with early detection and removal, chances of survival exceed 90 percent.

Most colon cancers start with benign polyps. If the polyps grow unnoticed and are not removed, they may become cancerous. Colon cancer is one of the few cancers, though, that can be prevented.

The most effective screening test for colon cancer is a complete colonoscopy.

While colonoscopy is the "gold standard," there are other approved screening tests.

Though not as reliable as a complete colonoscopy, these other tests have been approved for screening by groups like the American Cancer Society, and are preferable to not being screened at all. Alternative tests include: Fecal occult blood testing, flexible sigmoidoscopy or barium x-ray.

Who should have colorectal cancer screening?

- Anyone who is at least 50 years old.
- Anyone with a family history of colon cancer.
- Anyone who has a personal history of colon cancer or polyps.

What is a colonoscopy?

The large intestine (also called the large bowel), consists of the colon and rectum, which is the final part of the digestive system. In a colonoscopy, the patient is sedated and a doctor uses a thin, flexible tube to examine the entire large intestine. If a polyp (abnormal growth) is seen, it can be biopsied and removed. About 30 percent of people who are screened for colorectal cancer are found to have polyps.

Are there ways to prevent colon cancer?

To prevent colon cancer, specialists recommend eating a high-fiber, low-fat diet with plenty of fruits and vegetables, being physically active, maintaining a healthy weight, limiting alcohol consumption and to quitting smoking.

Because most polyps, and many colon cancers, have no symptoms, it is very important to have colorectal cancer screenings. A health-care provider can give guidance on the best screening option.

CHAPEL

When is the risk worth it?

Chaplain (Maj.) Stephen W. Austin
U.S. Army Chaplain Center and School

In his new book, "Take the Risk," Dr. Ben Carson looks at our attitudes toward risk. He is an interesting person to talk about this, because as a pediatric neurosurgeon he frequently performs high-risk surgeries on children who have a lot of life to lose.

Carson points out what we all know: sometimes, we take risks that serve no purpose — and that is just stupid. However, he focuses more on the opposite problem, being too afraid of risk. It is possible for us to be so adverse to risk that we are unable to seize new challenges and opportunities. Life without risk is probably not a life worth living.

We understand this concept in the Army. When we talk about risk management, we know that does not mean eliminating risk, but rather ensuring that we are taking appropriate risk. We are willing to risk life itself when our service demands it because we understand that some things are worth taking that level of risk.

I personally think that the ability to take risk has something to do with what we believe about God. If we trust God as someone who "has our back" we will be much more willing to stand up and step out.

This confidence in God extends beyond this life, enabling us to believe that to risk physical death is better than failing to live.

Psalms 91 puts it this way, "God will command his angels concerning you to guard you in all your ways."

As we begin a new year, what appropriate risk are you ready to take to live the life that God has planned for you?

Cases of the Week

A Soldier was arrested in connection with the theft of $570 worth of games and DVDs from the main exchange. The Soldier turned over the merchandise when confronted by security officers, according to MPs. The suspect was taken to PMO, processed and released to the unit.

A Soldier contacted PMO to report the theft of a debit card and money. A lockdown and a search of the area was conducted. The card was found in the possession of another Soldier, who claimed it was given to her by someone else, MPs said. The total loss to the Soldier reporting the incident was $300.

A fistfight between two Soldiers was reported to authorities. According to MPs, the Soldiers got in an argument, which turned physical when both participants struck each other in the face. One of the Soldiers was transported off post for treatment of a contusion. They were both processed and released to their units.

Drill sergeant makes All-Army Bowling team

Sgt. 1st Class William Palumbo, Company A, 3rd Battalion, 13th Infantry Regiment drill sergeant, goes for a strike during the 2008 Armed Forces Bowling Championships this month in Honolulu, Hawaii.

Heath Hamacher Leader Staff

For All-Army bowler Sgt. 1st Class William Palumbo, the first time was the charm.

Despite bowling for more than 30 years, Palumbo, a drill sergeant with Company A, 3rd Battalion, 13th Infantry Regiment, had never applied for All-Army consideration. He believed his soldierly duties would prevent him from attending, even if selected.

"I've been in Iraq; I've basically been overseas all but like four years of my military career," said Palumbo, a 16-year Army veteran. "And I've been a drill sergeant here for two years."

After getting the green light from his commander this year, Palumbo decided to apply for the 2008 Armed Forces Bowling Championships, hosted by U.S. Army Garrison, Hawaii.

His 215 average in the competitive Century Lanes bowling league was good enough to earn him a shot at making the All-Army team.

For the All-Army trials, Palumbo flew to Schofield Barracks in sunny Hawaii where he spent three days bowling six games per day against 12 of the Army's best bowlers, eventually placing second overall and qualifying for the eight-person team. Another four days were spent competing in the All-Armed Forces Tournament against bowlers from the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines.

Palumbo did not fare as well as he would have liked — placing 13th out of 16, but he enjoyed his time in the Aloha state. All told, he spent 10 days bowling, hiking, shopping and beach bumming in the near-perfect 80-degree weather.

"It is hard to believe that there are so many great bowlers in the Armed Forces," he said. "The weather was great and I got to do a little sightseeing while I was there. I had never been to Hawaii before."

Palumbo said he would love a return trip in 2009, but circumstances may make that impossible.

He is scheduled to make a permanent change of station move to Fort Hood, Texas, to a unit which may be deployed.

"I'll just have to talk to my commander when I get there," he said. "We'll just have to wait and see."

Health Rocks! introduces healthy lifestyle choices to kids

Heath Hamacher Leader Staff

The MG Robert B. Solomon Center was the place to be Friday night for fitness buffs of all ages.

Well, for at least those of school age.

Forty-nine Fort Jackson children from 4 to 17 years old participated in the Child and Youth Services' Health Rocks! program. Geared toward fun, the program is also intended to help raise the awareness of parents and children about living a healthier lifestyle.

"Each month we're doing some type of health and fitness program," said Craig Plowman, Youth Sports director. "This is one area where we're trying to get out of our box of just team and individual sports. We're getting more into nutrition, health and physical fitness with fun."

Health Rocks! featured several "mini-classes" of martial arts, Yoga and cardio-box which lasted 20 minutes each.

Other activities included basketball, jump rope, hula hoop and Dance Dance Revolution, a video game that requires players to dance on a dance pad.

DDR, as it is commonly known, is used in some schools as a physical fitness tool.

Sgt. Nickquawana Stephenson signed up her daughters, 9-year-old Malaika and 7-year-old Teakona.

"Both my daughters like talking about health," Stephenson said. "Malaika's on the basketball team and plays soccer, so any time she gets to work out, she's happy."

Stephenson said Malaika was a little hesitant initially, but she was all smiles once the fitness festivities began.

"I liked the Yoga because you get to do a lot of exercises and you get to relax," Malaika said. "I liked the martial arts, too."

Plowman considered the event a success and said he plans on putting on similar events monthly, starting with "Hoopla," scheduled for Feb. 29 at the Youth Center.

"Hoopla" is going to be like hula hoop and basketball skills combined," he said.

For more information on the Youth Center or upcoming events, call 751-5040/3773.

Maintainers nip 175th, remain undefeated

Heath Hamacher
Leader Staff

Allen Dade caught fire in the second half and Randy Peterson knocked down a clutch free throw with 2.7 seconds remaining to lead the 187th Ordnance Battalion to a 57-56 win over the scrappy 175th Maintenance Company Monday at Coleman Gym.

Dade led the 187th (3-0) in scoring with 19 points. At one point, he scored 13 straight, including three 3-pointers from the left corner.

This was a game of runs, featuring 11 lead changes and seven ties. Aaki Hayes, coach of the 187th Maintainers, called the 175th Reservists a “good team,” which employed a tricky strategy.

“Honestly, I think they changed the defense up on us a lot of times,” he said. “That got our offense out of sync and they got a lot of fast break points — it really confused us for a minute.”

With the 175th (0-3) trailing 50-49 late in the game, Samuel Singleton capped an 11-0 run, draining one from behind the arc and giving the 175th a 2-point lead. This prompted the Maintainers — which had led by as many as 10 — to call a timeout and regroup.

Down the stretch, free throws proved to be the deciding factor, with 175th going 2-for-2 and the Maintainers draining 3-of-5, including the game winner by Peterson. After his first shot rimmed out, Peterson converted on his second attempt with 2.7 seconds left. Dade picked off the ensuing inbounds pass to seal the victory.

“I just kept telling them to keep their composure,” Hayes said. “We were playing a pretty good game and I was just hoping (175th) would lose their composure. I told my guys to play their game and go with their instincts.”

The 187th jumped out to an early 11-2 lead, but the play of Anthony Moore — who finished the game with 26 points — kept the Reservists in the game. On defense, he was quick.

Offensively, he couldn’t be stopped in the paint. From long range, he hit consecutive 3-pointers at one point.

“We just tried to keep a fresh guy on him because he was really hurting us,” Hayes said.

Moore took advantage of a fast-break opportunity as the first half wound down, tying the game at 28 with a monstrous dunk as the clock expired.
